

Predatory Publishing

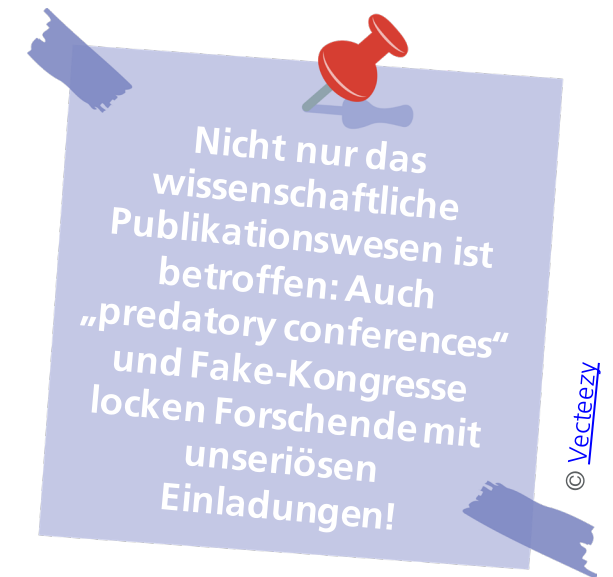

Servicedialog Forschung

„Predatory Publishing bedeutet etwa ‚räuberisches Publizieren‘. Bei Predatory Journals handelt es sich um Zeitschriften, die wissenschaftliche Autor*innen mit aggressiver Werbung und vermeintlich professionellem Auftreten zur Veröffentlichung von Beiträgen gegen Zahlung einer Publikationsgebühr auffordern, jedoch keine oder nur unzureichende Maßnahmen der Qualitätssicherung organisieren.“

open-access.network

“Predatory publishers or journals are those which charge authors a fee for publication with no intention of providing the expected services – such as editorial or peer review – in return. Charging a fee is a legitimate business model, but the publisher should be providing a good publishing service in return. Authors, realising that they have submitted their paper to a questionable publisher, can find they are charged a large fee if they want to withdraw their article.”

BEISPIEL 3: MDPI – (NOCH) IM GRAUBEREICH (?)

- expansives Verhalten der Geschäftsführung suggeriert „Quantität vor Qualität“
 - Lockangebote durch sehr kurze Zeitfenster für Peer-Review-Verfahren
 - hohe JIFs durch Selbstzitation
 - hohes Aufkommen an Spezial- und Sonderausgaben
- teilweise Deindexierung von Journals aus Verzeichnissen wie dem DOAJ
- Hochschulen/Bibliotheken schränken teilweise Publikationsförderung ein, z.B. SUB Göttingen
- gleichzeitig: ZB MED verhandelt mit MDPI in 2024 erfolgreich OA-Publikationsvereinbarung; über 100 teilnehmende Einrichtungen in Deutschland (Pressemitteilung)

“Performance metrics for editorial staffers prioritize the quantity of published manuscripts over their quality, our source in Bucharest said. Editors get one performance point for every published manuscript they handle, but only half of a point for rejecting a manuscript. Staffers who reach a certain number of points get a monthly bonus. Assistant editors, for instance, had a target of 15 points per month until Oct. 22, 2024, the day after we emailed MDPI the allegations in this story, when the number was lowered to 12, according to our source.”

„Qualitätsgesicherte Open-Access-Zeitschriften bieten ein Begutachtungsverfahren (meistens Peer Review), die Sichtbarmachung der Artikel in Fachdatenbanken und Katalogen, eine dauerhafte Referenzierung des Artikels und weitere seriöse Dienstleistungen an. Die Publikation von Forschungsergebnissen in sogenannten Predatory Journals muss hingegen als nicht den Standards der wissenschaftlichen Qualitätssicherung entsprechend gewertet werden.“

- Unzureichende Review-Verfahren können die Qualität der Publikation schmälern
- Fehlende Indexierung in qualitätsgeprüften Datenbanken kann die Verbreitung der Publikation negativ beeinflussen
- Fehlende technische Lösungen können eine dauerhafte Verfügbarkeit der Publikation verhindern

Stellen Sie sich beispielsweise folgende Fragen:

- Kennen Sie und Ihre Fachkolleg_innen die Zeitschrift? Gibt es eine nachprüfbare ISSN?
- Ist die Zeitschrift in DOAJ, Scopus und/oder anderen qualitätsgeprüften Datenbanken indexiert?
- Sind Ihnen die Herausgeber_innen bekannt? Sind Ihnen Autor_innen bekannt, die in der Zeitschrift publizieren?
- Gibt es Kontaktmöglichkeiten? Funktionieren diese?
- Kennen Sie den Verlag? Gibt es ein Impressum? Hat der Verlag wirklich seinen Sitz an der angegebenen Adresse?
- Ist der Verlag assoziiert mit Initiativen wie COPE, OASPA oder DOAJ/DOAB?
- Sind Kosteninformationen und Verfahren klar (Währung, waiver policies, Rechnungsstellung)?
- Gibt es detaillierte Informationen zur Qualitätsprüfung? Wird Ihnen eine sehr kurze Begutachtungszeit durch Peers und/oder schnelle Veröffentlichung versprochen?
- Gibt es klare Angaben zur Lizenzierung und Rechteübertragung?
- Gibt es Richtlinien zum Umgang mit Pre- und Postprints?
- Gibt es Informationen zu verwendeten Dateiformaten? Eine Plattform, auf der die Publikation dauerhaft verfügbar ist? Werden bibliometrische Daten mit Ihnen geteilt?
- Nutzt der Verlag anerkannte persistente Identifikatoren (DOI, ORCID, ...) ?
